To the Honorable Members of the House of Representatives,

Today, I am honored to sign into law the Revised EPA 2024, a pivotal piece of legislation that underscores our unwavering commitment to the safety and security of our nation. This law makes it an arrestable offense to evade the police, thereby reinforcing the authority of our law enforcement officers and ensuring that those who attempt to flee from justice are held accountable.

The Revised EPA 2024 defines "evading the police" as continuing to flee a law enforcement officer after they have verbally communicated that the person must not move, or if the officer is actively attempting to arrest or detain the individual. This clear and precise definition will help eliminate any ambiguity and ensure that our officers can perform their duties effectively and without unnecessary hindrance.

By enacting this law, we are sending a strong and unequivocal message that the rule of law must be respected. Those who choose to evade the police not only endanger themselves but also put the lives of our officers and the public at risk. This behavior undermines the very foundation of our legal system and cannot be tolerated. It is imperative that we support our law enforcement officers by providing them with the legal tools they need to maintain order and protect our communities.

I want to commend the House of Representatives for their diligent work in passing this bill. Their commitment to the safety and security of our citizens is evident in this legislation. I also want to extend my deepest gratitude to our law enforcement officers for their unwavering dedication and service to our nation. Their bravery and professionalism are the bedrock of our society, and we owe them a debt of gratitude.

As President of Vindex Nation, I am committed to upholding the rule of law and ensuring that our nation remains a safe and secure place for all its citizens. The signing of the Revised EPA 2024 is a significant step in that direction. This law will not only enhance the effectiveness of our law enforcement agencies but also serve as a deterrent to those who might consider evading the police in the future.

In conclusion, let this law be a testament to our collective resolve to uphold justice and maintain the peace and security of our beloved nation. Together, we will continue to build a society where the rule of law is respected, and every citizen can feel safe and protected.

Sincerely,
